107 YEARS AGO
TODAY LINCOLN WAS BORN

village, loved by all who knew her. She was probably the most refined woman to whom Mr. Lincoln at that time had ever spoken. He was always welcomed by her father and mother. The latter he always called "Aunt Polly" in his familiar way. Both father and mother entertained him for a deep affection, and though they never openly expressed themselves in regard to Ann's choice of a husband, yet they would, without doubt, have rejoiced to receive the manly Abe Lincoln into their family. He lighted up their home with a cheerful glow whenever he entered, and he gave a pleasant flow of mirth and joy to their conversation. Ann's relatives were all united in encouraging the suit, which the young man pressed with great earnestness, but she firmly insisted that her honor demanded her to wait until she could be released from her first engagement before she could make a second. In 1835 she and Lincoln were formally and solemnly betrothed, but she asked to wait another year, hoping that McNeill would return and that she might release herself from her engagement to him. Weeks and months passed and he returned not. While she was waiting, Lincoln was studying night and day to make himself worthy of Ann, and while he was growing in mind and body and daily developing the great intellect that was to fit him to lead a mighty nation through a fierce struggle of war Ann was hourly fading away.

In August, 1835, she died, as her physicians said, of brain fever, but, as her neighbors believed, of the long series of disappointments and the pangs inflicted upon her heart and mind in striving to do right in regard to her two lovers to whom she had pledged her hand. Ann was buried at the little cemetery at New Salem, and as the future President stood over her green grave with streaming eyes he said, "My heart lies buried here." After the burial he began to exhibit that deep vein of gloom and sadness so often noticeable in his conduct while President. He lost all self-control and every friend he had in New Salem pronounced him insane. He was constantly watched, and with especial vigilance, says one of his neighbors, "during storms, fogs and damp or gloomy weather, for fear of an accident." At such time he would rave piteously, saying, among other expressions, "I can never be reconciled to have the snow, rain and storms to beat upon her grave." His friends finally succeeded in securing him in a log hut a little way from town, where he was watched over with anxious solicitude for a few months, until he appeared to be restored to his reason, but traces of sadness always lingered in his character. He visited the cemetery daily and wept over the grave. At this time he was heard frequently to repeat a few lines of that poem he so often recited in after years, entitled, "Why should the spirit of a mortal be proud?" Some nights as he left the grave of Ann Rutledge he was heard to murmur portions of it. On the night of March 22, 1864, as he sat in the White House, he dropped his pen, turned from his letters, and with half closed eyes repeated it entire to a friend.

LINCOLN'S IMMORTAL WORDS AT GETTYSBURG

Four score and seven years ago our forefathers brought forth on this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal.

Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field as a final resting place for those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this.

But, in a larger sense, we cannot dedicate—we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow—this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here have consecrated it far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note nor long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us, the living, rather, to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they have thus far so nobly advanced. It is, rather, for us to be dedicated to the great task remaining before us—that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion—that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain—that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom—and that the government of the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth.

It has often been said—and rightly so—that Lincoln had two distinct sides to his nature; the humorous and the serious. One of the best stories he used to tell about himself is the following:

Two Quakeresses were traveling on the railroad and were discussing the probable termination of the war. "I think," said the first, "that Jefferson will succeed." "Why does thee think so?" asked the other. "Because Jefferson is a praying man." "And so is Abraham a praying man." "Yes; but the Lord will think Abraham is joking!"

BUSINESS OF IMPORTANCE

AT THE SKATING RINK TO-NIGHT. WILL YOU BE THERE?

This is Lincoln's birthday and tonight the Ketchikan Firemen will give a Ball at the Rink and owing to the size of the hall no one need stay away for fear there will not be enough space for their feet. Those feet of yours may be large, but the floor space at the Rink was planned for the accommodation of many feet, so come, because all of us are going to be there and we want to see you. Besides the dancing the boys have prepared refreshments and the music will be fine. We know you will have a good time and we think you know you will have a good time and besides all "that" the proceeds will go towards a gymnasium in reality. Everybody come and "Boost for the Gymnasium."

KETCHIKAN FIREMEN'S BALL

The Firemen brave all storms, let the public repay them a courtesy by turning out to their dance tonight.

The purpose of a Gymnasium, where all may improve their physical condition.

Come out and have a good time.

George Chesney says that it blows like hell around the point. He says that it blows so hard that the wind keeps the waves down and also held his boat back and he had to get off and shove it along in order to reach Ketchikan.

RETURNS FROM CHICAGO

J. H. Scott, superintendent of the Fish By-Products plant at Wards Cove returned on the steamer Spokane today after a months business trip to Chicago. Mr. Scott and wife, who accompanied him east, went to the plant at Wards Cove today.
